I have to say that writing was not one of my favorite things to do. Mostly, because I always struggle to put my thoughts in order. After taking English Composition 1, I've learned some strategies and techniques that I can use to organize my thoughts. Once I learned that writing is all about planning, drafting, and revising, I got somewhat better in writing. In that class, I wrote many essays such as personal narrative, compare and contrast, persuasive, informative, and also a research paper. I've enjoyed writing all the essays, but my favorite one was the persuasive essay.

I believe that writing is not one of my favorite activities in life. Even though I've learned so much about writing and how effectively I could use the strategies I don't usually like writing. Instead, I might read someone else's writing. Writing needs patience and time. Since I'm busy in my life doing many things at a time, I don't have the patience or the time to write. Talking about my opinion regarding my ability of writing, I would say that I don't have the gift of writing, but I've learned the skills. When I was writing my essays, I often used free writing and brainstorming strategies. That gave me an opportunity to put down all my ideas freely. Then revising helped me to shape my thoughts in logical way. I think my weakness is that I don't have a rich vocabulary. I need to learn new words and I also need to use them properly.

Sometimes I feel that I write long sentences and I need to focus on writing strong and short sentences. I believe that having good focus is my strength. When I was writing my essays, I usually keep my digital distractions away.

My tentative educational goals are to earn an associate degree in teacher education and then apply for credentials. I finished my higher education in Sri Lanka and earned a BA degree in Liberal Arts. Recently I evaluated it and I’m pleased to say that they accepted my degree with 3.25 GPA. I would like to become a kindergarten teacher and help students become strong and powerful leaders.
